(UP and AP Dispatches) PARIS — Premier Edgar

Faure today ordered the en-tire French delegation to the United Nations to return to Paris immediately in retaliation for the UN decision to debate the Algerian crisis

Faure's action came less than 24 hours after the French dele-gation, headed by Foreign Minister Antoine Pinay, walked out of the UN general assembly in protest.

VIRTUAL BOYCOTT

Faure's recall order amounted to a virtual French boycott of the United Nations for the time being.

Faure announced his decision after an urgent trans-Atlantic telephone talk with Pinay in New York shortly before noon. Pinay fully agreed with the move.

A New Tax Formula

THE SKY OVER OTTAWA THIS week has been full of kites. What the Federal Government really intends to do about its present agreements with the provinces will not be known until next week's fed-eral-provincial conference. But it now seems clear that the existing system, in form anyway, is about to end, and that a new formula, if not a new system, must be devised.

At present nine provinces, all of them but Quebec, collect no income taxes and only marginal corporation taxes. They are compensated for this loss of revenue by subsidies from the federat treasury. In nearly all provinces they secure by subsidy far more than they could possibly raise by levying their own taxes.

This arrangement apparently is to be scrapped not, however, for finan-cial reasons but because it has antagonized Quebec and is unsatisfactory to the other two rich provinces of Ontario and British Columbia.

The decisive argument against it is that French Canada has been isofrom the rest of the nation. Probably next week's conference will conduct its argument on purely fiscal grounds but the essential problem is political, in the non-partisan sense of that word. It is the oldest problem of our federal state—the problem reconciling the contrary pressures of a large and diverse nation.

would be easy, of course, merely to scrap the present tax agreements and tell the provinces to collect their own taxes as they please, and no doubt that would relieve the political burdens of the Federal Government, since its tax collections are never popular. To do that, however, would be to assure the poorer provinces must continue to get large subsidies from Ottawa. The federal experts evidently have worked out a neat formula to accomplish both these purposes and presumably it will be revealed on The recent well-arranged news leaks suggest that the proposed formula will work on these lines: Any province can levy income and corporation taxes and they will be collected, for the sake of conven-ience, through the federal revenue machinery. The Federal Government will reduce its levies by the amount of the provincial tax up to a fixed limit, probably ten per cent of the federal tax, as in Quebec. Provided a province agrees to hold its rate down to this limit it will be entitled to a federal subsidy.

This subsidy will be reckoned by a new formula, yet to be revealed, but in fact will give the various provinces about the same amount as they already are receiving.

All this may seem a complex and nd about route back to the criginal result, in terms of subsidies, but it will represent a great gain politi-cally (in no partisan sense) if it satisfies the provinces as a whole and, in particular, ends the fiscal isolation PAUSE TO WONDER The statement by N

One of the compensations for the travail of attempting to write a book is travail of attempting to write a book is the kindiy and appreciative attitude displayed in the splendid review Tom Merriman gave my latest opus "Pilots Of The Purple Twilight" and I felt that I must write and thank him. When Denny got back to Calgary with his dad's body he dropped in to see me and begged me not to let the book drop because his father had hit the long trail. The kid was very brave, but doted on

LOOSE ENDS

A Poor Thing But Our Own

AT this time of year, depend upon it. every editorial page east of the Great Lakes, that great dividing line of vegetable growth, will break out in autumn foliage. We shall be in-formed, in flaming prose, that the eastern maple forest is on fire. that the leaves have turned to crimson from Gatineau to Matanedia and that there is simply no spectacle like this anywhere else in the world. No doubt this is true, but it doesn't help Hutchison us much west of the Laurentians. No words can hope to convey the eastern autumn, no painter can capture it, no mind can imagine it and the eye can hardly believe it on sight.

WE must therefore take the word of the Me must not grudge them their brief hour of glory before the winter blanket is unrolled and the spectrum fades into pure white. We must make do with what we have. It is not much, to be sure, a poor thing, as Touchstone gen-erously remarked about his girl friend.

The muted easel of our western forest begins now to take on a little color. The first maples are turning yellow in the coastal woods and I assume whough the newspapers never report these important events) that the interior poplars, from the foothills of the Rockies to the Red River, are getting back on the gold standard after the green infla-

Autumn Calm

A lucky gardener, after the worst growing season record, may have achieved a faint flush on the face of some tomato (though it looks from here as if the entire crop must go into pickles.) And if one may be excused a note of local patriotism, the frail autumn crocuses, which are not crocuses at all, have surged up, defying the season, in hues richer even than the eastern jungle.

IT is autumn all right, here as elsewhere, though we never boast of our accomplishments. You don't even have to see it to know that it has arrived.

You can hear it.

The crickets (if they are crickets) chirp all day in the yellowing fields, the surest voice of the season, more eloquent to the trained listener than all the prose or poetry ever written—an improved ver-sion, you might say, of Keates' autumnal

There is another voice, weaker but more reliable. A gardener, sadly cutting down the rank growth of summer and putting his perennials to bed for another year as they fall to sleep one by one, will become aware of a shred of sound uttering an annual dirge of peculiar poignance. The tiny tree toad silent since last spring, has found his voice.

HIS big cousins, the frogs, stopped singing months ago in the swamp and have retired into winter quarters. He now climbs into his private pulpit and, before a silent audience, booms out his tiny sermon in a squeaking, rusty voice, long out of use.

You can hear that sermon, like a lonely voice of doom, but seldom see the preacher. You may suspect that he is concealed in some tree or shrub, you may be sure that he is within the reach of your hand, but his green camouflage protects him from the human eye, and if the congregation presses less than the sentences in the congregation presses less than the sentences and the congregation presses less than the sentences are successful to the congregation presses less than the sentences are the sentences and the sentences are successful to t if the congregation presses too close to the pulpit the sermon suddenly ceases.

The Rise and Fall of a Freebooter

IN the harbor of Buenos Aires a tall. dark complexioned man sat in a tiny room aboard a gunboat. His thoughts were bitter as he endured the confine-ment of what was in effect a prison. It was september 19 and he had just fled aboard the Paraguayan naval vessel to seek political sanctuary. His name was Juan Domingo Peron. He was 60 and he had just lost, completely, the possession that meant everything to him in life:

power. As he nursed his gailing thoughts in the silence of that first night, Peron m have wondered over and over again where he had gone wrong, what step he had taken that had set in motion the forces that led to his downfall.

It must have been a difficult question to decide, for Peron's career had the imprint of Greek tragedy. Step by step he marched from obscurity to fame and again to obscurity, as though ne neither could nor would evade the classic pro-As in the act of birth man begins to

Spark of Ambition

His start in life had shown no particu lar promise. He came of a middle-class family and might well have spent his life in a bank or a school or a mercantile house. But he was sent to a military academy at the age of 15. Somewhere along the line a spark of ruthless ambition ignited. It smouldered for years before bursting into flame.

At the age of 30 Peron was still a captain. But he took part in an army coup in 1930 that unscated the civilian regime of President Irigoyen. The uprising clamped a military control on Argentina's government that is still in

A year later Peron reached the rank of major; in 1935 he became a Lleutenant-Colonel. He had long since formed the to attempt it.

Above all, was that driving ambition Here was the material of a dictator. All that was required was a little more training, and then-opportunity.

The training came just before the Second World War, when Col. Peron spent time in Germany and Italy as a military attache. There he saw Nazism and Fascism at first hand. Perhaps it was then that the dream of power became a blueprint, that the ambitious hope be-came a definite plan.

The fall of Peron had begun, in a

as minister of labor.
In this position he dealt with the descamisados, the "shirtless ones" who, 6 millions strong, provided the backbone of labor in the country. Peron coldly saw them as a source of political strength and deliberately set out to make himself their champion.

Peron's advancement continued. He became minister of war, and then vice-president. Suddenly it burst on the country's leaders, if not the country, that here was the strongest man in the regime. as minister of labor.

In 1944 there was another military coup, this time led by Peron. He ejected President Ramirez and replaced him with General Farrel. He had become the power behind the throne.

But in this position Peron was himself the target of revolutionaries. By October, 1945, opposition to him had grown to the point where a group of officers seized control, removed all his titles and placed him under arrest.

At this point one of the few personal attachments Peron had formed paid off.

A post-to-ordelented actress. Eva Durate.

A not-too-talented actress, Eva Duarte, had won the affections of Juan Peron after the death of his wife. Their col-laboration became political as well as She massed thousands of the still loyal workers in a great demonstration in Buenos Aires that shook the officers' group. They quarreled among themselves and the coup died out. Peron returned to power in triumph, married Eva, and began his decade of supreme rule. She was to die at the height of her career. her career.

There were, of course, difficulties. Peron was no statesman and no economist. While the war had boomed Argentina's export trade in meat and wheat filled the treasury. Now that prosperity increases. Inflation gripped the country. There were two bad harvest years in 1951 and '52. There were budgetary troubles and the great industrialization program did not work out.

Above all there was the adverse foreign reaction. Peron's progressive application of all the evil forces of dictatorship alienated the United States and other western countries. Tighter and tighter he drew the strings of power. Freedom of the press and political free-dom were throttled. The legislative as-sembly was packed with Peronista supporters, the constitution was ignored liberal thought was driven underground

Where was the fateful line crossed? It is difficult to say. But the gods must have smiled as their plaything acted out

In 1951 another military uprising was defeated. But two years later a ominous incident occurred. As Peron addressed a mob from the balcony of Government House in Buenos Aires-he had made the Mussolini technique his own—two bombs were exploded in the crowd. Peron was frightened by this demonstration of protest. He ordered out his street fighters—the Hitler technique—and wrecked a few properties to show his own potentials.

It was not to last. In mid-September the three armed services combined to overthrow him. The people surged through the streets acclaiming the military junta that took over the government. The extent of public opposition to the deposed leader became evident for the first time in many years.

So Peron escaped to the Paraguayan gunboa: in the harbor his loot and his dreams behind him, Whether the future can hold anything for him remains to be seen. But the curtain has fallen on the main act and is not likely to rise again.

Should Grow Up

UNITED NATIONS — When he made Canada's policy statement here, Paul Martin spoke as a representative of a small power, which often rubs shoulders with the great, to the representatives of the small powers. Such advice, coming from Mr. Martin, was well received here because of the peculiar place we have in world affairs. Canada is

A review of the past year which was the most active for Canadian foreign affairs would seem to give weight to Mr. Martin's admonitions. Aside from our membership in the United Nations and NATO, there was:

1. Our work on the truce commissions in Indo-China. Some 500 Canadians are engaged in maintaining the peace in Vietnam, Laos, and Cambodia; it is probably the biggest job the Department of External Affairs has

2. Our participation in the disarmament talks (with the Big Four, we are members of the disarmament sub-committee). It was largely due to Mr. Martin that there was a unanimous resolution at the last assembly to set off these negotiations. 3. Canada's donation of an atomic reactor re-appointment of the Canadian soldier, Maj.-Gen. E. L. M. Burns, as United Nations truce supervisor in Palestine.

5. The visit of the minister of fisheries, coming visit of the minister of external affairs, Lester B. Pearson. (Mr. Sinclair went to a whaling conference in Moscow and travelled across Siberia to Peking, having a nasty accident on the way. Although his trip was unofficial, he was the first western abinet minister to visit China since the Com munists took over.)

In his speech to the General Assembly, Mr. Martin gave a reason for achieving disarmament which directly affects the small powers. He said that if the arms race was not quickly curbed, countries which were not now in possession of the atom bomb would have it.

Those countries might include Irsael or

Egypt; it is known that dictator Peron, before he was overthrown, was trying to get possession of an atom bomb for Argentina. In the hands of small countries, such a weapon could be much more dangerous than in the hands of the great powers which have, so fary shown a respect for it.

Yet, another reason for agreement, Mr.

Martin said, was that there was a worse weapon to come than the hydrogen bomb. He refused to tell what this was, saying that it was highly classified material, but adding that the Russians knew

As Canada's representative outlined it, our sition here is a middle-of-the-road one. Mr. Martin called for an end to recrimination and said, although not in these words: While we may have our own views as to who started the Cold War, let's recognize that there has been propaganda on both sides.

But he always returned to his theme that the smaller powers had as responsible a role to play as the great powers, that they should be cautious and moderate in their actions, and that they should do their best to maintain the Geneva spirit and prepare the way for

MATCHES-Bryant and May is as famous a British name as Lea and Perrins and Crosse and Blackwell. In the old days Bryant and May had a tight stranglehold on the match situation here. The main Italian brand is named Index and features a pointed SYNOPSIS-A storm of moderate intensity caused gales along the northern B.C. coast overnight. ese winds were subsiding this morning as the centre of the disturbance neared the coast.

Rain fell over the entire coast except for the extreme southern tip of Vancouver Island and Clear skies brought light frost to many northern interior points but cloudiness kept southern sections generally free of frost. Skies will be cloudy in most districts on Sunday, with widely scattered showers. Temperatures will be somewhat milder tonight in the interior.

POSTWAR VICTORIA . . .

Extra Touch Of Hospitality'

Victoria Times Staff
It is piquant to find that flags over some Victoria homes are still being lowered at sundown.

Many times during my 12 years away in England, I told

Incredulous natives of the phenomenon that you have to go to Canada's farthest West to find a city so

British that some of its inhabitants lower the flag at sundown. Sometimes I wondered if my information might be out of date. I even heard it rumored once or twice that Victoria was turning into an American-type city.

But when I returned here just a few days ago and wandered nostalgically around some of the residential areas, lo and behold, flags were still being lowered

In other respects the garden city eems to have lost none of its remembered characteristics. The old ivy-clad Empress, offset by the green domes of the Legislature, still dominates the peaceful waterfront. The trim white steamers still ply in and out of the stately harbor with its merry cluster of yachts-and now, I notice, a sea-

But on the taip over from Vancouver there is a difference. In earlier times no one bothered to tell us whether we were approaching Victoria or Botany Bay. Nowadays we hear a voice over the ship's loudspeaker system that leaves

"Welcome," says the voice, "to Victoria, city of beauti-

"Welcome" says the voice, "to Victoria, city of beautiful homes and pardens. And we hope you will have a happy and healthful stay."

Yes, the tourist technique has been polished up quite a bit, and while Victoria was always a friendly city, with a certain reserve, it seems to me there is now an extra touch of hospitality in the stores and cafes.

To avone arriving from England, still not completely

To anyone arriving from England—still not completely recovered from the war years—there is a special charm in the brightness of the store windows, their gay variety of clothing and the sparkling array of bright new household appliances.

He Feared the Coffee Machine

The automatic coffee machines (there is Times building) had me buffaloed at first. I felt sure you had to bring your own cup, failing which you might be sprayed with boiling liquid. But no, the machine produced own with butleresque efficiency and quietly filled it. Almost I expected to hear a robot voice saying: "And where will you have your coffee, Sir?"

There is as yet no machine for turning out hamburgers and hot dogs, but at least they are made as they should be London a few enterprising cafes lure in Canadian and American visitors with a species of hamburger that is as much like the real thing as haggis is like Yorkshire

These, however, are mere details in the scheme of living. My general impression is that Victoria is still one of the pleasantest places in the world to live. I had heard, of course, of the tremendous spread of building into outlying districts that are now part of Greater Victoria, yet was surprised by the beauty and variety of the homes and gardens to be found in places I once knew as unbroken bushland

More Land Available Here

It is encouraging, too, to meet so many middle wage earners who own an acre or two of land. In England anyone with more than a hundred feet of garden belongs to the luxury class. Heavy taxation and the high cost of property in relation to wages confine most workers to a fairly small backyard, and even the nobility have been driven to opening their grounds to the public for an admission fee to help with the upkeep.

As to city life, Victoria is a good deal quieter than London, which seems to get more crowded every month, and I am amazed by the orderliness of pedestrians who wait for the green light before crossing the street. In London we would watch for a brief gap in the traffic, then make a dash for it. Which confirms my feeling that in England the pedestrian is more privileged than the motorist.

Our Racing Fans Are Quieter

The horse fans at Sandown Park seem much less excita-ble than British racegoers and I miss the raucous cries of the Cockney bookies calling the odds around the field.
What I shall miss more are the flower-bordered rustic village, the old oak-beamed tavern and the grey-worn church, washed by the rains of centuries—and the breadth and charm of old London with its remarkable blending of the present and the past (when I left they were building com-mercial TV studios within a golf shot of Temple Bar).

But Canada offers tremendous compensations and I'm convinced most Canadians have a better life than they, would in England—particularly if they are fortunate enough to live in the land where flags are still lowered at sundown!

Griffith Borgeson and Eugene Jaderquist, two of the country's leading authorities on sports and racing cars, have written a popular and comprehensive study of the field, Sports and Classic Cars, which Prentice-Hall will publish November 8. This over-all survey of foreign and domestic designs traces the development of classic and sportsears from 1920 to the present. It is considered the most complete volume published in the field. Approximately 140 photographs, including several in full color, illustrate descriptions of the outstanding cars produced in this century. Anecdotes about the men who have designed, built and driven the cars supplement the factual material. Comparative reference charts supply mechanical details and per formance records of the various models. Mr. Borgeson and Mr. Jaderquist are consultants to leading designers and have collaborated on sports car articles for many popular and technical magazines.

ART in REVIEW By COLIN GRAHAM

The critic Wilenski mentions somewhere in one of his works a London acquaintance who had spent some time amassing a collection of photographs of Dutch paintings of the 17th century. Although by no means complete, his files contained over 50,000 items. Impressive as this figure seems, it is even more remarkable when one considers the proportion of paintings that must have disappeared in the course of three centuries as the result of damage, fire and neglect.

Let's have a look at what actually happens in the classroom. Come with me and visit a typical United States school. Let's walk into a first-grade room.

There are about 25 children in this class. Their teacher is a bright young woman, not too long out of teachers' college, who takes her job seriously.

The children are divided into three groups when it comes to list finger, then Barbara, then Dick, then Sandra, then Dick, then George, then Louise, then Mary.

Tom reads: "Jack ... Vancouver Island Viewpoint Reinforcement From Up-Island Newspaper Editorial Columns Give Other Hunters a Break

PARKSVILLE-QUALICUM BEACH PROGRESS-With the return of the hunting season, reports of fatal and near-fatal accidents will probably begin pouring in from all parts of the province. One fatal accident has already taken place in the Interior.

No matter how the average hunting fatality is glossed over, it generally results from someone's carelessness . . . someone forgot to see if a gun was loaded; someone pulled a gun out of a truck muzzle first; someone thought a shadowy figure in the bush was a deer, and another tragedy was written into the hunting season's books.

This type of accident will probably be duplicated year after year until the day when every hunter takes time out to ponder the folly of it all. Rules for safe, happy hunting have been outlined annually in this and other newspapers but one simple little admission by all hunters would eliminate the need for most safety regulations. That admission . . . mere acceptance of the fact that every other hunter in the bush has the right to live.

The Ruling of Twelve

COMOX DISTRICT FREE PRESS—It is a very sad state of affairs when a 209-member chamber of commerce cannot get more than 11 members out at a meeting and then have to telephone individuals to make up a working quorum

Not only is it sad but it is rather foolish when one thinks that 12 people are able to bring about changes which might affect the whole area.

What we have in mind is the two-train business. On the action of 12 members of the chamber of commerce, that group is looking into the possibility of having two trains a day to Victoria so that people from this district can travel down-Island and back in a day.

That only means one thing and that is a shopping trip in the capital city.

If money starts to move down south in a steady stream and goes into Victoria shops instead of into local stores, the first people to bow their heads in sorrow will be the very people who should have been attending chamber meetings instead of leaving the district's business up to a dozen

THE COWICHAN LEADER-There should be satisfacthe cowichan Leader—There should be satisfaction at the progress already made toward a new King's Daughters' Hospital. In this issue, Air Marshall Sir Philip Livingston, F.R.C.S., Cowichan Bay, as head of the development committee, presents the first official statement on the proposed organization procedure to be adopted.

The statement supplies the necessary background, once again, concerning the handicaps of the present overcrowded institution. It does not permit to furnish a financial picture. That will come later.

Under the plan the area covered by Cowichan School District No. 65 will finance the project, out of taxation, that system having been chosen as the quickest, most reliable and most satisfactory. Until the cost is known comment must be reserved. There will be considerable confidence, however, in the good judgment of the representative board of directors that the cost is well within our means. Our voluntary boards, like our councils, have a good reputation for guarding against outline and carry its message and organization forward with-out delay. Our district is growing. Besides, how many residents can say that the provision of hospital accommodation here, as distinct from hospital service, has cost them one dollar since the board's drive was carried out in 1946 to get the hospital out of debt?

Of Dam Urged By Engineers

CHEMAINUS — The chief engineer of the water rights branch, department of lands and forests, has recommended that the new Miller creek dam be reinforced on the down stream side.

In a letter to A. R. Colby In a letter to A. R. Colby, engineer supervising the installation of the new Chemainus waterworks system, the chief engineer said: 'Our calculations indicate that some additional reinforcement in the vicinity of the centre of the spillway on the downstream side is desirable.

"The assumption that the old dam downstream from the new stabilizing force, which at the present time may be correct, may not hold throughout the life of the new structure." Further additions to the dam sec-tion will provide fullest stabil-ity against the worst conditions that could be imposed."

Mr. Colby proposes to strengthen the centre section of the dam by a buttress. The work will be carried out after his plans and specifications are approved by the water rights branch.

Phillips and wife Marty are the attractive youngsters above. The "Personality Parade" started last Monday, Parade of Children," which has become a popular and continues two more weeks. Parents may take their youngsters to the salon between 10 a.m. and 3 p.m., and for a minimum fee receive six picture proofs, and their favorite mounted. Age limit for the little models is from six months to six years. At the end of the picture-taking, a panel of three judges will decide which is the cutest, and a sizeable merchandise certificate will be awarded, together with lesser prizes.

Parents of about 1,000 children are expected to enter the competition. Mr. Phillips and his wife have a knack of handling children, and pictures are taken with a minimum of fuss or bother. On really busy days, about 90 children are photographed. Friday the camera team handled 36 children, with not one wail.

WHY GROW OLD?

Little Regarded Foods Really Are 'Glamorous' By JOSEPHINE LOWMAN

There are three classes of foods which are most important because of their health value but which are more or less unsung. We do not think of them as glamorous foods although they help to make us look glamorous and also have delightful flavors.

The first is the root family. Strictly speaking not all vegetables which grow under the ground are root vegetables, but for convenience sake we will classify them this way. I am speaking of potatoes, onions, beets, carrots, parsnips and turnips. They give us starches, sugars, vitamins and minerals. Bake them rather than boil them whenever possible. If you boil them cook them dry. Bo not pour any water off.

The second group is the dried bean family. This group is low in cost and extremely high in health value. These foods provide splendid quantities of minerals and vitamins and also

The Tunio is Tops*—Those of you who attended the recent fall fashion shows in Victoria will agree that the tunic has definitely found its niche in the new collections. Narrow and tube like by day it widens toward the hem for afternoon and evenilizing it ranges from thigh-length to seven-eighths and comes in every kind of fabric,

Warning! If you are short keep your tunic narrow or you'll look square.

Warning! If you are short keep your tunic narrow or you'll look square.

Tall and slim you'll be a fashion plate in any tunic style. Although a good deal of full-ness is seen in the peplum tunic the elongated line is still followed by narrow sleeves and narrow skirt. The shoulder line is just a little wider this season. Not that padding is being used but the set in sleeve is more in evidence and this gives the appearance of more width. This added width—although you will not notice it at first glance—gives a better balance to the Choice of millinery seems to be up to the individual. Latest trend in hats is toward a higher crown and a wider brim but there are still plenty of smart shapes for lovers of tiny hats. Almost never out of fashion, the beret for autumn is shown in many variations and many very gay shades. Dark and sombre colors lead the way for clothing but millinery is as bright and exciting as a display of fireworks. Glowes can also spark your costume with a splash of color. Vivid tones in kid or fabric add the finishing touch to a smart fall costume.

Better to Delay Marriage Than to Live With In-Laws

By ELIZABETH B. HURLOCK, PhD

Living with in-laws is likely to bring complications. A young woman should know what she is in for and be prepared to cope with the problems that arise before agreeing to this arrangement. That is the warning I am giving to the young woman

(Q)-"I am 24 years old and have been (Q)—"I am 24 years old and have been going steady with a young man of 32 for the past year. We became engaged last month, and plan to be married at Christmas. My parents are very much concerned because of his home situation. His mother is separated from his father and he lives at home with her and a maiden aunt. My flance's father gives the mother some money, but not enough to support the home. We would live with the mother and aunt. They have never acknowledge our engagement and I have never met them. My and aunt. They have never acknowledge our engagement and I have never met them. My parents feel that this would make an unhappy arrangement for me, but as I have pointed out, I ptan to continue working and would be out of house when Jim is. When he is there, he and I will be together. I feel that I can make a go of it, though it is not what I would choose. What is your in of the matter?"—T. M.

(A)—My opinion of the matter is the same as your parents',

Only perhaps stronger. You are heading for a situation that seems doomed from the start. I cannot see how you could hope to be happy with such an arrangement, no matter how much you may love this young man.

Three women in a household can make trouble for each other, even if they are congenial. But, from what you have said, your fiance's mother and aunt have already declared open war on you. How could you expect to find them pleasant co-panions under such conditions? Your fiance may love you very dearly, but he also loves his mother and he seems to have a strong feeling of obligation to-ward her and his aunt. Otherwise, he would not feel that he had ward her and his aunt. Otherwise, he would not feel that he had to live with them while his father was still alive and should be supporting the mother.

Even when he is at home with you, you must realize that he would be torn between you and his mother. The mother and aunt could make things very difficult for you. Unless he can offer you a better future than this, you will do well to reject his offer of marriage.

BRIDGE LESSON

By Oswald Jacoby Today's hand was bid very energetically and properly to a sound slam contract. The only problem was to play it properly,

Declarer naturally went right up with dummy's ace of spades at the first trick and tried the trump fir the clubs optimistically

NORTH (D) 1 and finessing the jack. ♦ A 6 ♣ K 9 5 Since the trump finesse WEST EAST South drew three rounds South drew three rounds of trumps and proceeded to play the clubs pessimistically. ★KJ102 ♥K85 ♦J10752 SOUTH AJ10984 4AJ842 of one trick. The correct play is to take the ace first and then lead to North-South vul.
